PAYS A TRIBUTE TO HIRSHEL G. FISHER

In a letter from E. C. Kenkel, mayor of Savannah, Minn., to the Gazette, the following tribute is paid to the memory of the late Hirschel Fisher, son of Mrs. Minnie Fisher of this city, who passed away recently in that village. The letter says: "The report of the death of Hirschel G. Fisher, and when the news spread that our kind maker had stepped in and claimed him, a sad thought spread over our entire village. All medical attention, a kind mother's hand, and a loving wife were unable to save him from the dreaded pneumonia, and he passed away December 10th, 1918, at 10:30 a. m. Although Hirschel Fisher had only been a resident of our village for a little over a year, he made many friends, friends who feel his death almost as keen as a brother. His pleasing ways, happy smile, and honest dealing will long be remembered and missed by everyone. During the past summer and fall Hirschel was employed as night watchman and marshal by the village council and filled his position to the entire satisfaction of all. He had a way of handling men that always resulted in the pleasantest manner, and he was particularly kind and thoughtful to a man in need. In case of sickness he was always the first on hand to lend assistance and it is with regret that we are unable to the nature of his sickness, it was impossible for friends to be with him. It seems hard to understand why a young man right in the prime of life should be taken away and there is but one thing to say, 'Thy will be done.' The entire community mourns with the bereaved mother, wife and sisters in their sad loss, and may he rest in peace."

Several to Wed: Licenses to marry were granted to Hubert Leroy and Mary Ann, and to H. B. Johnson and Anna M. Renner, both of Beloit. One was also granted to Emil C. Luebke of Milton Junction and Ida M. Stockman of the town of Milton.

SENTENCED TO WAUPUN FOR STEALING CLOTHES; HELD HERE FOR TRIAL

James Cantwell, Convicted Of Theft May Have To Answer Additional Charge of Stealing Money. James Cantwell, who was arrested Sunday morning for stealing an auto and some clothes was taken before Judge Maxfield yesterday afternoon and on his plea of guilty he was sentenced to one year in the state prison at Waupun. James was to be taken to the prison this morning but unfortunately two of his neighbors, Mrs. James McDonald and Miss Nellie McDonald complained to the chief that Cantwell had obtained their Christmas checks from the Bower City bank at the post office and had cashed them. As a result of this disclosure James is being held for a further trial to answer the charge of cashing the checks.

It is alleged that he went to the post office and as is the custom obtained the mail of several of his neighbors. He looked it over he discovered the checks addressed to Miss Nellie McDonald. He opened the envelope and found two checks, one for ten dollars and fifty cents and one for thirty dollars.

He went to the Janesville Dry Goods Company where he made a purchase and cashed the smaller of the two checks. He refused to make any statement except that he got the letters when he received some mail for himself.

WILLIAM BRENNAN GETS ONE YEAR IN COUNTY JAIL

William Brennan, a switchman employed by the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad was sentenced to one year in the county jail this morning when he entered a plea of guilty to the charge of drunkenness. He is an old offender in Janesville and has been warned many times that he would receive a heavy sentence unless he quit drinking.

John Mettler although he owns a farm in Hanover failed to purchase any Liberty Bonds, this statement from him brought some sharp criticism from Judge Maxfield when John was arraigned to answer a charge of drunkenness.

John stated that he came to Janesville yesterday to cash a check and although he refused to drink whiskey that his friends prevailed upon him until he consented to take one drink of whiskey. As a result he became intoxicated in an argument in the Queen Jewelry Store on the Corn Exchange.

When Judge Maxfield assessed him five dollars and costs which if he did not pay he would have to spend several months in the county jail Mettler started to beg. He implored the judge to let him go and he certainly did go when after paying the five dollars and costs he was told to get back to Hanover.

When nourishing diet is required use Hirsche's, the original Malted Milk.

LAURENCE GRIFFIN STILL IN HOSPITAL

Laurence Griffin, who left Janesville with Company M, 1st Regt. and remained behind the division at Camp McCurtain in the supply department, when that organization left for France, and later crossed the Atlantic and saw some active service, being wounded several months ago, has written his mother that he arrived in this country the latter part of last week on the hospital ship Mercy and is now in the hospital at Burlington, Iowa, but experts seem to be discharged and sent home, he hopes before Christmas.

HELD FOR OPERATING CAR WITHOUT CONSENT

High James of Evansville was arraigned before Judge Maxfield in the municipal court yesterday afternoon to answer a charge of taking the automobile of L. J. Hockett of Evansville and operating the same without the owner's consent.

James is a youth of twenty-one years and asserted that he merely took the car for a little ride, not thinking that the owner would object. He entered a plea of guilty to the charge. Passing of sentence was deferred until December 23rd, at ten o'clock and he was remanded to the county jail awaiting bail for $1,000.

GAME PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION MEET

Rock County Game Protective Association Elect Officers at Meeting Held Last Evening at City Hall.

A meeting of the Rock County Game Protective Association was held at the city hall last evening for the purpose of reorganizing the association.

It was the general opinion of the members present that as no dues had been collected in two years that an election of officers be held first. Ballots were prepared and the following officers were elected: President, Harry Nowland, vice president, William P. Mason secretary and treasurer, Charles E. Snyder.

It was moved and carried at the meeting that the new association should be known as the Rock County Game Protective Association. By-laws were adopted and some important amendments made to the by-laws of the old association.

A. C. Buell of Appleton, Field Secretary of the State Game Protective Association spoke concerning the progress which has been made during the past few years in the affiliations throughout the state. This being a state wide movement in the interests of the conservation of our wild life.

Buell then this state work was supported entirely through the financial assistance of the various clubs. It was then moved and carried that part of the dues collected by the Rock County Association should be turned over to the state to further that part of the work.

An active campaign for members was begun at once and sportsmen and others interested in the general protection of our wild life are asked to join.

ANOTHER FALSE ALARM CALLS OUT DEPARTMENT

Some folks have a vague idea of humor and very little thought for the comfort of others. This is the opinion formed by the members of the Janesville fire department when they were called out last evening just as some of the fire ladies were preparing to retire the alarm sounded from box 13 at the corner of Racine and Graham street.

The department responded at once and when they arrived at the box no signs of a fire were in evidence. A search and inquiry of the neighborhood failed to reveal any conflagration of any kind so the men started back to the stations all asserting that the jokers might of picked out a better night than Monday evening with the heavy fog to watch the department run.

PRIZE IS OFFERED FOR BEST ARTICLE

Acting upon advice given by the Wisconsin War History Commission, the Woman's History club has offered a prize of ten dollars to that pupil from the eighth grade of the city who excels in writing a paper upon the subject: "My City's Record in the War."

The papers will include a survey of everything accomplished on war purposes in a city from April 6, 1917 to the present time.

The Woman's History club has charge of the collecting of War History data from Janesville and vicinity, and through the interest caused among the school children in competing for this prize, the club expects that a large number of military record cards of our schools.

Janesville's War History collection will form, eventually, in all probability a unit in the State Historical Library at Madison.

Edgerton News

Edgerton, Dec. 17.—At a meeting of the membership committee of the Chamber of Commerce held last evening quite a number of new members were taken into the organization. The committee will begin at once the canvass of the city for members and all indications are for a large membership. With the entire community pulling together and with the one point in view to make the city of Edgerton a bigger and better place in which to live, the results that will be achieved can hardly be measured.

A contest was held at the high school recently to secure appropriate posters to advertise the Song Festival to be given by the Glee Club, Dec. 20th. Many beautiful designs were submitted and from these were selected the winners. Miss Elizabeth Towne was awarded first place, Miss Mary Young second, and Miss Cleo Herrick was awarded third place. The posters are displayed in prominent windows in the city of Edgerton and the public is invited to attend.

At a meeting of the city council held last evening at the council chambers the reparation question was discussed. Several streets are up for cement reparation and paving on all approaches to the city hall.

A memorial in the form of a building was also discussed for our soldiers. The building in mind would be used as a city hall and an armory would be included in the plans of structure. A building of this nature would be a great improvement as all of the city officers would be provided with suitable quarters.

Robert Wilson returned last evening from the Great Lakes training station having received an honorable discharge from the service. About two hundred men were trusted out from the Great Lakes training station daily.

Why Twelve is Standard Unit. The numeral 12 was chosen as a standard unit because it contains so many smaller factors; this is the reason why it is still retained as a base in spite of the efforts to replace it by the metric system. All primitive nations found fractions very difficult, and even the Egyptians, who were most proficient in fractions, used methods that were very long and cumbersome. It was a great advantage, therefore, to have a standard unit which could be divided into parts without giving common fractions, and 12 was such a number, as 1-2, 1-3, 1-4 and 1-6 of 12 were all whole numbers.—Science Monthly.

Test of Honesty. Money never made a man honest. Higher salary rarely secures the scruples of better men, for the public. That has been shown, time and again when the salary of a position was raised for the purpose of attracting business talent to it. The result usually has been that some back politician has accepted the higher pay with thanks or else that the sort of business man who was attracted to place holding by the money offered soon developed into an inferior grade of politician. Honesty and dishonesty have no necessary relation to a man's financial or social condition.—Buffalo Express.

VICTOR E. HEMMING NAMED CITY CLERK

ELECTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL LAST EVENING TO FILL UNEXPIRED TERM OF JAMES B. WORTHINGTON.

TO IMPROVE STREETS

Resolution Calling for Better Streets in Janesville Introduced by Alderman Paulz Passed by Aldermen.

Victor E. Hemming was appointed to fill the unexpired term of city clerk James B. Worthington by a vote of seven to three over John J. Cronin at the meeting of the city council last evening.

The council required only one ballot to name the new clerk Mr. Hemming receiving the support of seven aldermen and Mr. Cronin being supported by three. Mr. Hemming is a native of Janesville and today as Mr. Worthington is confined to the Mercy hospital where he recently underwent an operation.

The council meeting opened at eight o'clock with the reading of the minutes. City Treasurer George Muenchow acted as city clerk in the absence of Mr. Worthington. The minutes were read and approved.

A report from the chief of the fire department for the quarter was received and accepted. The report stated that the department had responded to one hundred and forty alarms for fire during the past three months exclusive of false alarms of which there were between thirty and forty on Peace Day.

Chief Klein reported that the loss from fire for the quarter exceeded that of any previous quarter for some time and that the largest loss resulted from a fire in the Carle Block on December 1st. Mr. Klein estimated the entire loss at $70,000. He also asked the council for two dozen rubber coats and one thousand feet of hand line.

A claim was presented from the Grand Grubbing Contracting Company for $5,041.91 for the paving of Main street. The claim is for the paving between the car tracks which has not been paid by the Janesville Traction company. The claim was referred to the judiciary committee and Alderman Arthur Jones moved that the claim be disallowed. His motion was carried.

A claim for $1000 was filed against the city by C. E. Enslow attorney for Berion Peterson who was run over by a city team at the Washington school on December 5th and suffered a broken leg and other injuries. The claim was referred to the judiciary committee. No report of the accident has been received at the city hall and Street Commissioner Thomas McKeown states that he has had no team working in the grounds of the Washington school. The matter will be investigated by the City Attorney.

The resignation of James B. Worthington as city clerk was read and accepted. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Worthington for the faithful manner in which he discharged his duties since assuming the office of city clerk.

Alderman Cronin read the report of the Board of Education and moved that the same be accepted and published. The motion was carried.

Alderman Welsh presented the monthly report of the City Treasurer and moved that the same be accepted and placed on file. The report of the treasurer and salary list were read and approved and a motion made that orders be drawn for the same.

Alderman Roy Horn introduced a resolution that the purchasing committee be empowered to buy to dozen rain coats, one thousand feet of hand line and one dozen gas masks for the fire department. The resolution was adopted. In purchasing the gas masks the fire department will be better equipped to fight fires where the smoke is dense.

Alderman Horn introduced a resolution that a fire hydrant be installed at the corner of South Third and Ringold streets. The resolution was passed. Alderman Jones moved that the plumbing bond of C. E. Cochran be accepted.

Alderman Paulz introduced a resolution providing that the Spanish War Veterans be allowed to have free use of a room in the city hall for the purpose of holding meetings. The resolution was accepted. Alderman Paulz then addressed the council regarding the detention hospital and explained in detail several improvements that would be necessary. The improvements will be made at once.

Alderman Badger moved that two electric lights be installed on South Third street between East Milwaukee and Court street. The lights were ordered installed.

A vote was then called for by Alderman John J. Dulin to name a successor for James B. Worthington. On the first ballot Victor Hemming was elected by a vote of seven to three.

Mayor Valentine, City Treasurer Muenchow and Alderman Welsh spoke to the council relative to the hiring of a young lady to assist in the city treasurer's office until after the tax paying period. It was decided to secure the services of Miss Margaret Donahue to assist the city treasurer until March 1st.

Alderman Paulz again introduced his improvement resolution calling for ten blocks of improved streets in each ward for the next ten years providing that not more than $15,000 be expended in 1918. The resolution called for ten blocks in each ward and Alderman Welsh and Cronin although greatly in favor of the improvement did not favor the idea of improving ten blocks in each ward.

Both of the aldermen addressed the council and spoke of the dire need of good streets in Janesville, but they requested Alderman Paulz to change the resolution to read in place of ten blocks in each ward to read fifty blocks to be decided by the aldermen. The resolution was changed to meet the approval of Alderman Cronin and Welsh and was accepted.

Victor E. Hemming the new city clerk, then addressed the council and in a short address thanked the gentlemen for the position and assured them that he would give them his very best efforts and would work for the interest of Janesville at all times. On motion of Alderman Dulin the council adjourned.

Opportunity to Be Seized. A porter in London was engaged in cleaning a luggage van, when the door swung back, striking him violently on the head. "Oh! Pat," he exclaimed to an Irishman standing on the platform, "I believe I've cut open my head." "Well, begor, now's the time to get something into it," was Pat's witty reply.

ROMAN INVASION OF BRITAIN

Good Reasons for Settling August 27 as the Date on Which Julius Caesar Landed on the Island.

The 27th day of August, 56 B. C., may, upon good grounds, be set down as the day on which Caesar invaded the Island of Britain. It is interesting to learn the method by which a painstaking and ingenious inquirer determined the date as given—Caesar himself tells that he proceeded on his expedition when little of the summer remained—when the people of the south of Britain were engaged in their harvest—and we learn that he returned before the equinox. Thus, the day must have been in August. He further tells us that the full moon occurred on the fourth day after his landing. The full moon of August in that year, as given by astronomical tables, occurred at 9 a. m. of the 31st. Hence, Caesar landed on the 27th.

It is well known that Caesar met with greater difficulty in landing and making good his first footing on the island than he expected. The southern Britons were a people well advanced in civilization at the time. It was only about a century after this that London, by its present name, was a city crowded with merchants and of world-wide celebrity.

History repeats itself. England, even in those early days when Caesar made war on the Yentii, to the west of Gaul.

the Britons sent a fleet of ships to their assistance.

SEIZED CAPE COLONY TWICE

Peace of Amiens Nullified Britain's Capture of Holland's South African Territory in 1795.

Early in the wars of the French Revolution Holland was forced to become an ally of Great Britain. A British fleet appeared off Cape Town in August, 1795, and the colony surrendered on September 18. For seven years Britain held the country, spending fully eight million dollars in improving it. Monopolies were taken off trade, torture was abolished, and prosperity prevailed, whereas before the colony had been on the verge of ruin. In 1802 the Peace of Amiens secured for Napoleon a breathing spell, which he used in preparing still greater attacks upon the liberties of Europe. By this treaty Cape Colony was restored to Holland. War was resumed in 1803, with Holland an ally once more of France. Again the British captured Cape Colony, and when peace was definitely settled in 1815, after Waterloo, Britain retained South Africa, paying Holland six million pounds sterling, the colonies of Demerara, Essequibo and Berbice being included in the sale. The population consisted of 29,700 whites, holding 29,500 slaves, and 17,650 free Hottentots. Britain suppressed the slave trade and in 1834 the slaves were emancipated by the British government.

Snaring Snakes.

For sheer, downright danger the work of snake catching in the Australian bush compares very favorably with anything one might imagine. It is also an exceedingly profitable method of earning a livelihood—that is, if you survive.

The snakes are collected for the sake of their venom, a substance that, like radium, is valued by the grain, a pound of it being worth about $500. It is in active demand by chemists and is obtained, as far as Australia is concerned, from only three species of snakes—the death adder, the brown adder and the tiger snake.

The reptiles must be caught unharmed, and it goes without saying that the business demands considerable skill and agility on the part of those following it.

Tiger snakes are the best, for they carry most venom; and they are still numerous in the more remote parts of the seldom-visited interior.

Switzerland's Gipsies.

Just 500 years ago, writes a correspondent of the Neue Zürcher Zeitung, our forefathers in the city on the Limmat had a new experience. A motley army of people came into Switzerland from the east and camped just outside the walls of Zurich for two weeks. They numbered some 14,000 persons, men, women and children. These swarthy wayfarers, according to an old chronicle, were commonly known as gipsies or heathens. They said they had been driven out of Egypt. Their clothing was miserable, but they wore many ornaments of gold and silver, maintained perfect order and discipline, and paid punctually for all they ate and drank. After seven years' wanderings they are said to have returned to their original home. This was the first appearance of gipsies in Switzerland.

Regular Beauty Treatment.

A musical-comedy actress, who prides herself on the beauty of her limbs, suspends herself daily from a cord fastened across her room, and suffers a sister professional to work her legs pumphant for ten or twelve minutes. This treatment is beneficial in several ways, exercising the muscles and imparting strength and hardiness—both essential to a burlesque dancer. Artists' models undergo similar treatment.

A Parisian beauty specialist achieved reputation and riches by inventing a round-shoulder cure. Hundreds of afflicted beauties placed themselves under his care, spending hours daily in a prostrate position, and wearing a peculiar backboard with an ingeniously formed neckpiece.—Exchange.

OUR RETURNED SOLDIERS.

Janesville and Rock county are just as glad to welcome back its soldier boys whether they saw actual service in France or merely were retained in this country for final training. The biblio says: "Many are called but few are chosen." This is true of this war.
The United States called into service many millions of men and was prepared to call millions more. If the emperor of Germany had not abdicated after Turkey, Bulgaria and Austria (to use a sporting parlance) threw up the sponge. Then came the armistice. It was left to General Foch, commander-in-chief of the allied forces, to dictate that, and he did.

The United States has been in this war less than two years. England, France and Belgium, and even Italy, have suffered longer than this period and we do not count Russia, that began earnestly, but whose government was bought by German gold and became a menace rather than an ally in the fight.

General Foch made terms none too harsh for the Hun to swallow. They had made their own terms long enough and every red-headed American on the firing line sanctions Foch's terms and hopes they will be enforced to the letter. They know what the Hun really is and not what he is thought to be. Actual contact means a great deal.

However, as these boys come back to Janesville by ones or twos, or by the half score they are welcomed by their friends and relatives, but no public demonstration is made. Not because as a community we do not welcome them, not because we feel their work has not been influential to the final peace, final collapse of the German empire, for it was, but simply because it would be one continual demonstration, and it is best to wait until several hundred have returned and then have our grand civic demonstration.

We know our boys who went as Company A are now in the German territory, and it will be months before they return. They were selected because of their ability and their courage and experience as tried and seasoned troops. Of Company I, of Beloit the same can be said, of the boys who remain overseas with the 33rd and 34th divisions. They are now in Germany, as are the boys of the 32nd, the Rainbow division. Wisconsin is honored, so let us plan for one celebration which will include all the boys who have returned from all the camps at home or abroad?

BOOMING GOOD ROADS.

It is predicted by people in touch with highway work, that the close of the war was going to see a nationwide movement for better roads.
Pennsylvania recently voted by a four to one majority, for a $50,000,000 bond issue for roads. Illinois sanctioned a $50,000,000 issue for the same purpose. Now Minnesota is talking of borrowing $100,000,000.
Wisconsin is not behind and Rock county is ready to do its share.

These sums seem enormous. But we are coming to realize that the old theory whereby a state would set aside a million or so a year for trunk line highways amounted to but little.
Of course large sums were spent in local taxation. But much of this money was dribbled away in unscientific methods.

We are in the position of a manufacturer who suddenly awakes to the fact that his production is costing him very high, because his appliances are antiquated. Spending a few dollars here and there does not remove the fundamental defects of the machinery.

You can't produce food economically on a farm the outlet of which is a rough, sandy, muddy, or rutty road. Either the farmer has got to sell that food at an impossibly low figure, or it is going to increase the living cost of it to the consumer to a reprehensible degree.

Furthermore good roads help settle the help question. When trucks can make a quick journey with produce to the nearest railroad station, the farm help get back quickly to the farm. A farm in a good roads district can be run on less labor.

Even if all our states should carry out good road developments on the scale already undertaken by several, it would not spend one per cent of our national wealth. The producer who is not willing to spend one per cent of his capital to secure decent transportation facilities, is too slow for the 20th century. He belongs back in the 18th.

ARE YOU A MEMBER?

Have you signed your name and paid your dollar for the Red Cross membership as yet? If not, why not?
There is a cause that is essential to mankind, not only in this country, but the world over. The American Red Cross is recognized wherever the Stars and Stripes fly and it is mighty certain that they will fly from every vessel worth while and in every port for some time to come. Not a country of Europe that has not felt the influences of the Red Cross and does not today long for further aid. Talk to the soldiers returning from Europe who received their first aid in the wonderful hospitals they conducted in France and Belgium. Listen to their story and then be glad to sign up and pay your dollar to be a part of this great work of reconstruction of the world even though we are at peace.
The Geneva Cross stands for something that even the Hun could not dominate. Let him shower his shells upon their structures flying over it, let his airships drop bombs upon them, still the next train load of wounded Huns or Americans, they received the same treatment. That is Christianity and that is what the Red

A LEAGUE OF PEACE.

Some of our statesmen feel that the proposed League to Enforce Peace, or any league of nations, would bind us too closely, and that our voice in such a league might not count more than that of some insignificant nation. They feel that we would be out-voted by the European members of the league, whose interests would not accord with ours. If our Monroe doctrine, they say, which we always regarded essential to our safety, should be challenged, we would have to abandon it should a majority of the league decide to sanction it.

Unless we take steps to prevent war, we must carry an enormous military and naval establishment, with tremendous costs for munitions and munition plants. Another war like this, and the world would be reduced to absolute ruin.

The very least that should be done is to form an international council to meet every year to adjust relations between nations and maintain harmony. There is much less likelihood of future wars if the representatives of the powers are working together in an international body. Whether it is wise to give such a body the power to declare war against a refractory member of the council, without referring the matter to the governments represented, is a question that time would have to work out. It is not probable that our government would consent to grant such power at first.

Such a council ought to be able to enforce its decisions without war by the threat of economic boycott. When a quarrelsome nation realizes that it will be cut off from foreign intercourse unless it behaves, it will think long and hard before putting an army in the field. If we fail now to create the machinery that shall stop further wars, 10,000,000 lives have been sacrificed in vain, and their blood will cry out in reproach.

BABY'S LOT NOT HAPPY ONE

Small Wonder That So Many Children of the Puritans Ended Their Earthly Career Early.

There is no doubt of the strength and endurance of the Puritan babies which survived the hardships of the first few months of their lives. The Puritans came to America some time before modern heating appliances were scheduled to arrive, and their winter days and nights could have been, little less than one long shiver.

If his elders suffered so much discomfort, what must have been the hardship of the newest baby who, a few days after his arrival in this world, was taken to the coldest part of it—the bleak little Puritan meeting house—which never knew anything better than heatless days? "This expedition often completed the baby's earthly career," says Laura E. Richards, in recounting the tribulations of the Puritan junior population. We think of the hardness of the early Puritan children, but this writer says, "Or Judge Sewall's 14 children, but three survived him, a majority dying in infancy; and of the 15 children of his friend, Cotton Mather, but two survived their father." The infant mortality due to exposure may be readily conjectured.

In addition to the visit to the cold meeting house, the baby must steel himself to face the greater or lesser ailments of babyhood—and their remedies. One of these remedies, which admirably asserts the spirit of the times, was reserved as a cure for fits or "rickets," the trouble was called, and was known as "sawdust water." This concoction, containing a peck of garden shell snails, was made doubly effective by adding a quart of treated earthworms.

SLEEP AS AID TO LONGEVITY

Long Hours in Bed May Mean Long Life, But the Question Arises, Is It Worth It?

The farmer's wife at Market Boscworth, England, who, "though in perfect physical health," has remained in bed for three years may hold that if we all spent more time in bed we should live much longer. This theory is borne out by the experience of two sisters of Brillat-Savarin, who nearly attained a hundred years. They lived at a country house belonging to the author of the "Physiologie du Gout," which he used only in September and October. They spent ten months of the year in bed, getting up two days before his arrival, and living a normal life during his stay. On his departure they would say: "Goodbye until next September, Anthelme. We are going to bed." One of them died at the age of ninety-nine, as she was finishing dinner, her last words being, "Hurry up with the dessert."

On the other hand, some Swiss doctors say that the amount of sleep should be regulated by altitude. Too much sleep, they maintain, is as harmful as too much drink. In low-lying districts seven hours' slumber may be taken with impunity, but up in the mountains five hours' is quite enough. These sleep specialists also ban the practice of remaining in bed in the morning, half awake, and insist on the necessity of arising as soon as sleep fails.

Blown Up!

By RALPH HAMILTON

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Is that man still here?" "You mean Mr. Disney? Yes, Aunt Marcia, he is still carrying on his experiments down near the ravine."

Miss Marcia Waldeen, spinster, shivered, shuddered and drew her shawl about her thin shoulders in a protecting way. "That man" was Paul Disney. He had come to Alton three weeks previously, and had rented from Elva Bissell's mother an old dismantled shed located on a barren sequestered portion of the old farm near where there was a deep rocky ravine. Then he had put up signs on the trees all about, bearing the ominous warning word: "Danger!"

He had explained to Elva that he was in the service of a company manufacturing high explosives and desired a secluded spot where he could experiment with no annoyance or peril to others.

"Before he gets through he'll probably blow himself up," Aunt Marcia scolded now.

"Oh, I think not. He tells me he is very careful. I hope not, Aunt Marcia."

"You seem considerably interested in the young man," hinted Aunt Marcia, with a searching look.

"I am," frankly confessed Elva. "He is very kind to the children, insists on saving mother going downtown for things, and, as you know, is paying us liberally for the use of the old shed."

This was true. Bissell farm was sterile, poorly watered in the dry season, as poorly drained in the wet season. Alton river, navigable and yielding to the rich soil over beyond the ravine the fruit of an inexhaustible fertility, was diverted and cut off by a great wall of rock, and everything to the east, like Bissell farm, was designated a part of "the bad lands."

About noon, two days after that, the bright-faced, kindly-eyed young fellow answering to the name of Paul Disney, came around to the rear of the porch to the Bissell home, where Elva was ironing.

"Thought I'd tell you, Miss Bissell," he announced casually. "My experiments have succeeded and in a day or two I'll be going back to the city."

Elva's face fell so palpably that by that of Disney she noted that he read his expression and hastened to say, though blushing: "The children will miss you."

"I am about to make a final experiment," proceeded Disney, "and thought you might witness it, for it will be something like Fourth of July fireworks."

Elva accompanied Paul to the old shed. The latter went inside, brought out a dumpy-looking tin canister, and going over to where a giant tree stump was imbedded deep in the ground placed it in among the fibrous roots. He attached a fuse and ran back to where Elva was sheltered by a tenuity of the old shed.

"Now watch and see what half an ounce of the new explosive I have discovered will do," he said.

His last words were obscured by a deafening report. Elva thrilled, alarmed, put her hands over her ears and, awed, saw the great stump go hurtling up into the air, leaving a hole in the ground, big enough to hold a horse and wagon.

"It must be terrible stuff!" she tremored.

"Early tomorrow morning I am going to dump and explode the rest of it near the dead water arm of the river at the ravine edge. I'm through here and I shall have some very pleasant memories of the friends I have made."

"It has been a break in the monotony, I can assure you," murmured Elva, and wistfully.

It was just at dawn the next morning that the inmates of the Bissell home were almost thrown from their beds by an explosion that rattled windows for a mile around. Elva dressed hurriedly and ran out.

"Oh, I heard—that is, I hoped—you are safe!" she stammered, with pallid face, coming abruptly upon Disney.

"Oh, yes," he said in his easy, smiling way. "I never get too near the giant I have created when it is likely to growl. Miss Bissell, 'and his face grew serious,' the explosion has done something I never counted on, and I am wondering if the township won't prosecute me for malicious mischief."

"Why, what do you mean, Mr. Disney?"

"The explosion has blown away one entire side of the ravine wall—and look!"

He caught Elva's hand and led her beyond a line of trees. In marveling wonder she stood, dumfounded, and stared. The ravine wall was gone, and pouring over its lowest level was a torrent, almost a waterfall of rushing, sparkling water. The dry ravine had become a waterway, a new arm of the river had been created.

Property went up two hundred percent along this new water course within a day. Favorable popular opinion regarding Paul Disney arose unaccountably as the people viewed him as a wizard who had brought to their farms what they most needed—water.

A speculator offered Mrs. Bissell a fabulous sum for her little farm. She asked Disney as to its acceptance, for by that time he had told Elva how he loved her and was looked upon as "one of the family."

WAS ELEGANT SCHEME, BUT—

Great Detective Had Overlooked One Possible Happening, and the Witness Had Not.

There were just 13 guests at Mrs. Hyphen Ramrod's party. She thought it would prove unlucky and when she missed her $5,000 tungsten ring she knew it was. She telephoned Sheerluck Bones, the great detective, immediately after the discovery and a few minutes later he arrived.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he announced in his cold, clear tones, "a tungsten ring worth $5,000 has been stolen and one of you is the thief. Not to use a harsher word. Mrs. Hyphen Ramrod wishes me to spare the culprit's feelings, inasmuch as he is her guest. Very well. If you will kindly assemble about the dining table I will cause the lights to be extinguished and slowly count fifty. That will give the guilty party ample time to lay the ring on the table, under cover of the darkness. Otherwise I shall be obliged to search you all. But I should like a witness to be present. Mrs. Ramrod, kindly procure a witness."

Mrs. Ramrod left and returned with a passer-by, a tall man with side whiskers and a vacant stare. The great detective waved his hand, the room was plunged in darkness, and slowly he counted fifty. At "forty-eight" the unmistakable tinkle of tungsten against wood was heard as the stolen ring was tossed on the table. Immediately afterward there was a violent crash, as of breaking glass. The great detective turned on the lights. The ring was not there. Neither was the witness.—Detroit Free Press.

DO SOMETHING WORTH WHILE

Much Benefit Will Come From Determination to Make Each Day Record of Accomplishment.

The one who starts out in the morning with a determination to do something during the day that will amount to something, that will be distinctive, that will have individuality, that will give him satisfaction at night, is a great deal more likely not to waste his day in frivolous, unproductive work than the one who starts out with no plan.

Begin every day, therefore, with a program and determine that, let what will come, you will carry it out as closely as possible. Follow it up persistently, day after day, and you will be surprised at the result.

Make up your mind at the very outset of the day that you will accomplish something that will amount to something; that you will not allow callers to fritter away your time, and that you will not permit the little annoyances of your business to spoil your day's work. Make up your mind that you will be larger than the trifles which cripple and cramp mediocre lives, and that you will rise above petty annoyances and interruptions and carry out your plans in a large and commanding way.

Make every day of your life count for something; make it tell in the grand results, not merely as an added day, but as an added day with something worthy achieved.

Much Property Reverts to Crown.

Few people realize the large amount of property which passes every year to the crown of England owing to the owners dying without heirs or next-of-kin, and without having made a will. In most of these cases the deceased is an illegitimate person with no children.

As a rule the crown does not appropriate the whole of the property, but makes what is called a compassionate allowance to the relatives of the deceased, although they may not be his relatives according to law, and in some cases to friends and servants who have performed services for him which entitle them to consideration.

The amount of the allowance is determined by the treasury, or, in the case of the estates of persons dying within the duchy of Lancaster, by the chancellor of the duchy.

The money does not pass to the king himself, but to the nation, and thus goes to relieve taxation.

The Thirteenth Commandment
By RUPERT HUGHES

She was grateful beyond words to the young man who embraced her and stared over her shoulder—over her left shoulder—at the tiny commerce of the streets and the toy park. She said to him:

"Oh, Clay, this is heaven! What do you say to our having an apartment just like this? Let's!"

She felt the arm about her a sudden slackening. The chin on her shoulder seemed to weigh heavier.

"It—would be nice," said Clay. She turned out of his embrace and looked at him.

He explained: "Do you know how much Bayard pays for these seven rooms and two baths?"

"No."

"Well, I've been looking about for a little nest for us, and I priced one like this. They charge twenty-five hundred dollars a year!"

She asked, shyly: "And that's more than we can afford?" She had no idea what salaries were paid to fairly placed in this city of fabulous wealth. She had merely a glamorous impression that her lover was there to get what she wanted.

"Well, we could afford it, all right," he laughed, merrily, "if we could get the view and wear the attitude. But we've never talked about money, honey, have we? I suppose we ought to. I don't want to give you any false impressions. Shall we talk about it now?"

"No, please!"

Daphne sat suddenly. She felt as a stranger to tall buildings feels when an express elevator starts downward.

She had rejoiced to think that she was escaping from her father's nagging dollarocracy to a region of love and light. She sorrowed a moment, then she gazed at her lover and saw how anxious he was. Her love came back to her. The express elevator was shooting upward now.

Was A Mere Skeleton From Lung Trouble

Gained 28½ pounds in 28 days, and completely recovered health.

"When my health failed a few months ago, several physicians told me I had consumption and refused to take any more. I might last longer in a higher climate but that it was only a question of time when I was soon reduced to a mere skeleton, weighing only 100 pounds, and was hardly able to walk."

"Finally a friend told me that Milks Emulsion had cured him and persuaded me to try it. By the time I had used two bottles, I noticed a decided improvement. I began to grow stronger. In 28 days I had gained 28½ pounds. I have now taken 28 bottles and am happier than words can tell to think I have regained my health. I weigh more and am stronger, and in better health than I have been in years. Milks Emulsion saved my life."—GAS. W. BYERS, 201½ Chestnut St., Terre Haute, Ind.

When success has been achieved in hundreds of cases just as hopeless as this, it seems incredible for any victim to be reduced to a mere skeleton. And it can do no harm in any case. And it costs nothing to try.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, does away with all attacks of gas and indigestion. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food.

Each and every bottle of Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to run-down, nervous people, and it has produced amazing results in many cases of tuberculosis of the lungs. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved. It is a truly wonderful medicine for weak, sickly children. No matter how severe your case, you are guaranteed—Take six bottles (come with you) and according to directions, your money will be promptly refunded. Then take the Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold and guaranteed by J. R. Baker.

"You're a little saint," he said as he took her in a very secular embrace. And then she began to laugh.

CHAPTER V.

He taxicabbed them down to the Knickerbocker and lunched them so lavishly that Daphne and her mother felt thoroughly reassured as to his means. Then he left them and descended to the subway.

Clay had insisted on their dining and the theater with him. They ate at the Astor and he fed them handsomely again. Mrs. Kip managed to catch a glimpse of the bill for the meal. It made her heart ache till she noted that Clay gave the waiter a dollar bill for the tip, without visible excitement on either side. She resolved that Mr. Wilmburn must be very rich or very rash.

Next morning the attack on the shops began in earnest. Clay did not lunch with them, and so Daphne and her mother ate in the restaurant of a department store and paid for their own meal. It made a difference. Even the bargain prices for food tolerated unpleasantly, and Mrs. Kip missed Clay's shining presence.

The chaos of the styles was so complete that the two women decided to retire and study out their campaign on the war maps. They began to make out lists and tally up prices. The afternoon went by, and they had accomplished little except an itemized despair.

"It's awful, that's what it is; it's simply awful," Mrs. Kip wailed. "It costs a fortune to get nothing at all!"

"I guess I'll go home and be an old maid," said Daphne. "Dad's money wouldn't buy me enough to get married in Sandusky."

But when Clay arrived to take them out to dinner he brought romance with him. He had had a good day at the office. There had been a flurry of hope in Wall street, and everybody said that the business world had reached the rock bottom of depression and started up again.

He celebrated the new era with a twelve-dollar dinner at the Plaza and another theater, and after that he made Mrs. Kip accompany them to a roof garden, where Daphne and he danced with other lads in the intervals between professional dances on the floor and vaudeville turns on the stage.

The next day there was another foray on the shops and the dressmakers, with a baffling result. The list of necessities with their minimum prices began to grow so long and ominous that they decided to give up keeping a list. They would buy what just had to be got, as cheaply as they could, and if they overran their appropriation papa would simply have to help them out.

The wedding date had yet to be fixed and the invitations ordered, with their royal phraseology in the latest formula.

They placed the day late enough for Bayard and his wife to get back from Europe. Bayard had not written, of course, since his marriage, except a brief note from the steamer the day he landed. But he had set six weeks as the limit of his absence.

One evening Clay announced that he had reserved three seats for a new comedy that had opened with success a few nights before. Mrs. Kip begged to be excused from going.

Clay urged her to reconsider her refusal. "Sure you won't go? You ought at least to see the star, Sheila Kemble. Some people say she looks a little like Daphne. Of course she doesn't; she's not a tenth as beautiful or young or attractive, but there is a kind of a resemblance. And they say she gets a thousand dollars a week. Daphne could give her cards and spades and beat her. Sure you won't go?"

"I wouldn't put my poor feet into those tight slippers tonight to see Daphne herself play Lady Macbeth."

So Clay and Daphne went alone.

After the last act he proposed Claymont for supper. Daphne accepted with zest. They entered an open taxi cab and scudded up the long bias street of Broadway to Seventy-second street and whisked across to Riverside drive and up its meandering splendor.

"This is too beautiful to go through so fast," Daphne cried. "It's wonderful. We ought to walk. Promise me we can walk home. It's such a gorgeous night."

"You're crazy, darling," he said. "I've got to get to my office tomorrow, and you've got to get home for breakfast."

"All right for you," she pouted. But it was none too serious a tragedy, and her spirits revived when the taxicab turned in through the shrubs about the old inn that had once been the home of Napoleon's brother and had heard the laughter of Theodosia Burr and of Betty Jumel in their primes.

Daphne did not like the table the head waiter led them to. It missed both the breeze and the view.

"Can't we sit over there?" she said. "I'll see."

The head waiter came reluctantly to his beck. When Clay asked for the table, the answer was curt:

"Sorry, sir; it is reserved."

Clay felt insulted. He whipped out his pocketbook and rebuked the tyrant with a bill. He thought it was a one-dollar bill, but he saw a "100" on it just as the swift and subtle head waiter absorbed it without seeming to. To ask for it back or for change was one of the most impossible things in the world.

Clay made it as easy for his new slave as he could.

"I don't think you understood which table I meant," he said, pointing to the one he had indicated before. "That one."

"Oh, that one!" said the head waiter. "Certainly, sir."

He led the way, beckoning waiters and omnibuses and snapping his fingers.

Clay ordered a supper as chastely perfect as a sonnet. It showed that he had both native ability and education in the art of ordering a meal. He impressed even the head waiter, and that is a triumph. That was Clay's purpose. Also he wanted to preserve his self-respect and the waiter's attention in the face of the supper that was being ordered at the next table. That was well ordered, too, but it was not a sonnet; it was a rhapsody. It was ordered by a man whose guests had not yet arrived. When Clay had dispatched his waiter he whispered to Daphne:

"See that fellow. That's Thomas Varlick Duane, one of the wealthiest known bachelors in New York. He was crazy about Lella."

"Not Bayard's Lella?"

"Yes. That's really why Bayard got married so quick. He was afraid Tom Duane would steal her. Nice enough fellow, but too much money!"

Daphne looked at the big man, and caught him looking at her with a favorable appraisal. She stared him down with a cold self-possession of the American girl who will neither flirt nor flinch. Duane yielded and turned his eyes to Clay, recognized him, and nodded.

"Hello, Wilmburn! 'Eah ya?"

"Feeling fairly snappy," said Clay.

Duane showed a willingness to come over and be presented, but Clay kept him off with a look like a pair of pushing hands.

Duane loitered about, waiting for his guests. He looked lonely. Daphne felt a mixture of charity and snobbery in her heart. She whispered to Clay:

"Invite the poor fellow over here till his guests come. I'm dying to be able to tell the people at home that I met the great Duane."

Again Clay shook his head.

"And that you introduced him to me."

Clay nodded. He beckoned Duane over with hardly more than a motion of the eyebrows. Duane came with a flattering eagerness. He put his hand out to Clay; and Clay, rising, made the presentation.

"You're not related to Bayard Kip, I hope," Duane said, with an amiable frown.

"He's my brother. Why?"

"I owe him a big grudge," said Duane. "He stole his wife from me, just as I was falling madly in love with her. Beautiful girl, your new sis-

"I've never seen her," said Daphne. "Beautiful girl?" he sighed. "Much too good for your brother. Infinitely beyond me. Why don't you both move over to my table? Miss Kemble is to be there with her manager. Mighty clever girl—Miss Kemble. Have you seen her new play?"

"We were there tonight," said Daphne. "She's glorious!"

"Come on over and play in our yard, then."

Daphne had never met a famous actress. She was wild to join the group and to know Tom Duane better. But Clay spoke with an icy finality.

"Thanks, old man. We've already ordered." He still stood, and he had not invited Duane to sit down.

Tom Duane looked at Daphne and smiled like a boy rebuked. "All right, I'll go quietly. I know when I'm kicked out. But next time I won't go so easily. Good night."

He put his warm, friendly hand out again to Daphne and to Clay, who nodded him away with an appalling informality, considering how great he was.

Other people came in, some of them plainly sightseers, some of them personages of quality. Everybody seemed happy, clandestine, romantic. This was life as Daphne wanted to live it. But at length she yawned. Her little hand could not conceal the contortion of her features.

"I'm gloriously tired, honey," she confessed, with a lovely intimacy. "It's the most beautiful supper I ever had, but I'm sleepy."

He smiled with indulgent tenderness and said to the waiter, "Check!"

"Now that is one of the most pathetic things I have ever seen," said the benevolent gentleman who stood with a friend watching a typical London street arab.

"You see, the ice cart has been delivering at that shop, and the poor little chap has annexed a piece from the gutter. You and I, who can get a refreshing drink whenever we're hungry, it cannot imagine why a fellow that piece of ice is to that boy. Here, my little lad, is a penny. Get yourself a drink. You must not eat that stuff."

"I wasn't going to eat it," said the grumpy little chap. "I was going to drop it down my father's back when he's asleep."

AMERICAN MEN AND WOMEN IN FIGHTING TRIM

They Keep To The Top Notch of Health

The spirit of the times demands perfect health and nerves, and keeping them up to the highest degree of efficiency.

Wise men and women have learned that it does not pay to allow health or nerves to run down and are quick to take advantage of Nature's greatest red blood and nerve tonic, Phosphated Iron, the minute they feel they are slowing up.

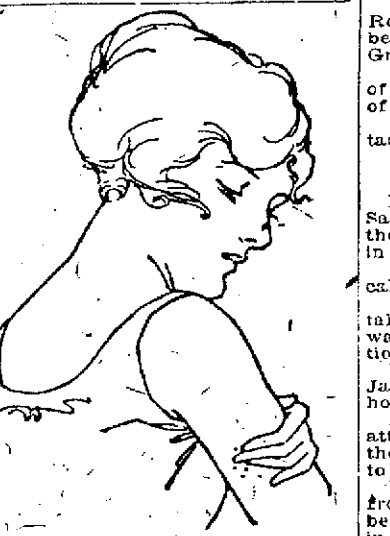

Whatever your work may be there is no reason why it should continue to tire you; work should only use the right amount of your energy. It is trying to work on your nerves and forcing yourself that wastes your strength, runs you down, gives you those restless nights, loss of appetite and indigestion, when you get up in the morning as tired as when you went to bed.

There is no sense in anyone being a victim of ill health, poor blood, over work, nerves or the blues when Phosphated Iron will afford such prompt and permanent relief.

All over the country men and women in every walk of life lay their good health, strength and nerves of iron to the use of Phosphated Iron, the red blood and nerve builder, and it will also put you on your feet, make you feel like a live one, it produces results that last, that's what counts, no "ifs" about it.

To insure physicians and their patients getting the genuine Phosphated Iron, we have no capsules, only tablets.

Dinner Stories

An old woman wearing a black bonnet boarded a train and, after calmly surveying everything in the compartment, turned to a red-haired boy and pointing to the communication cord asked: "What's that?"

"That's the bell for the waiter in the dining car."

She thereupon hooked the end of her parasol over the cord and gave it a vigorous jerk. Within a few moments the train came to a stop. The conductor rushed in and asked: "Who pulled that bell-cord?"

"I did," calmly replied the old lady. "Well, what did you want?" said the guard.

"A cup of coffee and a ham sandwich."

Easy to Make This Pine Cough Remedy

Thousands of families swear by its prompt results. Inexpensive, and saves about $2.

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine is famous for this purpose.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain granulated sugar syrup. To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ cups of sugar in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good and very pleasant—children take it eagerly.

You can feel this take hold of the cold or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—cough, Pine and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary chest ailment.

Pine is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind. Advertisement.

VITAL FACTS ABOUT HEALTH

A neglected cold is today's greatest danger.

That is the way grip and pneumonia begin.

Don't wait—begin today taking Father John's Medicine to get rid of the cold.

Many of the cheaper cough and cold "cures" on the market depend on "dope" for their effect.

"Dope" is dangerous. It has no real effect on the cold. It simply deadens the nerves and weakens the patient.

The safe remedy is Father John's Medicine which does its work without using any dangerous drugs or "dope" of any kind.

Remember Father John's Medicine has had more than sixty years of success for colds and body building. Its gentle laxative effect drives out impurities. Its "strengthening" body-building elements give vital force to ward off disease germs.

STRENGTH

Guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs.

WHO'S WHO in the Day's News

HERBERT JEDDY GRANT.
Herbert Jeddy Grant, who succeeds the late Joseph F. Smith as president of the Mormon church, or "Church of Latter Day Saints," by virtue of his office as president of the church of Twelve Apostles, is a representative of the more modern element of the Mormons. He is the first leader of the organization who was not a member of the original group of "Saints" that established the religion. He was born at Salt Lake City in 1866 and ordained an apostle in 1882. He is a wealthy banker with large property holdings throughout Utah.

Founded in 1820 by Joseph Smith, then of Manchester, N. Y., who claimed to have received visions of God ten years before, the sect rapidly grew.

Among Smith's first converts was Brigham Young, who later became leader of the church. Moving west to Utah, Ohio, and then to Jackson, Miss., Missouri, the "Saints" engaged extensively in business with varying fortunes.

In 1838, after several encounters with the "Gentiles," as non-Mormons were termed, they emigrated to Illinois, where a temple was commenced with the number of converts about 15,000.

Additional trouble occurred with the non-believers, and a battle ensued which resulted in the death of the founder and his brother.

In 1845, under the leadership of Brigham Young, the Mormons began the long trek across the plains to Utah, where they settled at Salt Lake City. There their power and wealth continued to grow. They pushed an extensive missionary propaganda throughout the United States, in Europe, Mexico and the Latin-American countries.

During the rule of the four presidents who succeeded Brigham Young the sect waxed wealthy despite an unending fight against them. The principal opposition was caused by their belief in polygamy. This is believed by them to have ceased after legislative acts passed by the congress of the United States.

President Grant, the new ruler of the church, will have enormous financial interests belonging to the central body of the sect, and with autocratic powers of administration he will be an important figure in politics and political life in the west.

COLONEL MARSHALL S. A. GAVE EXCELLENT TALK

A distinguished visitor was in the city yesterday—Colonel Marshall of the Salvation Army. He is in charge of the work in five states of the northwest, with headquarters in Minneapolis. He is constantly going from place to place within his jurisdiction, and from his unique experiences has gathered a store of knowledge concerning human nature, which he imparts in a forcible manner. In his talk last evening he touched on the war work being done by the organization, and he paid special tribute to the way the hearts of the people were opened to help along this task. He mentioned the fact that the quota asked for in the five states for war work, was $100,000, and that four times that amount, or $400,000, was raised. He preached a short sermon, taking for his text the 27th chapter of Acts, beginning from the seventh verse.

Commandant Thomas Parkhouse of Beloit was present and led the singing. His two daughters, accompanied by another young lady, sang a trio, which was very enjoyable. Commandant Connor sang an original song in which the audience joined in the chorus.

Colonel Marshall has been conducting services in Beloit during the week-end, and now is on his way back to Minneapolis, where they are making extensive preparations for their Christmas exercises, which in that city are quite a feature.

NEW RULINGS GIVEN FOR COAL CONSUMERS

Henry H. Hanson, fuel administrator for Janesville district has received new rulings relative to the use of hard and soft coal that are of interest to all consumers. The order states that "On account of the extreme shortage of the smaller sizes of Anthracite Coal:

"Grate, Egg, Coke or Buckwheat can be used for Hot Air Furnaces; and up to two thirds of order filled. Anthracite, Coke or Buckwheat can be used for Round Oak or non-magazine stoves. Delivered in one ton lots or less.

One-half Anthracite and the balance Chestnut or Pea Coal can be used for Range Burners, delivered in one ton lots.

"No government order needed, or restriction on Soft Coal, Coke or Anthracite or Buckwheat Coal.

"All prices to be based on government margins for each mixture. Pea and Buckwheat Coal will reduce the price.

"Dealers and consumers are warned that there is a heavy penalty fixed for a violation of these rules.

Ireland's Round Towers.

No one knows exactly when or why the round towers in Ireland were built, but some believe that the druids erected them as watch towers and places to which to go for safety in time of danger. A good many of the towers have the tops broken down and those which show the cone tops intact have mostly been restored. There is no door on the ground, the doors being purposely built at about 10 or 15 feet from the ground and were reached by ladders.

After the people had climbed inside they drew their ladders up after them and thus were out of reach of the Danes who frequently invaded the country. The clay windows of these towers are far up toward the top also. About 50 round towers remain in Ireland, but only a few of them are perfect. According to one authority, they were probably built between the 9th and 13th centuries.

Evansville News

Evansville, Dec. 17.—The Red Cross drive started with a vim yesterday and the returns last evening were very gratifying. The following are the committees who are handling this great drive this week: General Chairman, Father McDermott. Advertising, Paul Pullen, Bert Holmes. Treasury, R. D. Hartley. Honor List, W. J. Clark. Store Booths, the ladies of the Red Cross Division one, Mrs. W. J. Clark, division 2, Mrs. Gurin Johnson. Seminary, Dr. Blews. The shops, John Baker, Zola Miller. District captains, J. S. Pullen, J. F. Waddell, Rev. O. W. Smith.

With these committees at work it is estimated that every man and woman will be given the opportunity to become members of the great society for the good of humanity for the year 1919. And once given the opportunity surely they will embrace it. Read the letters from the boys who are across, hear the story that they are telling as they come home to us one by one, each and everyone are filled with the wonder(u) work of the Red Cross in the lands across the sea. And could the ones who now lie sleeping in "Flanders field" speak their lips would tell you that everything that human aid could do, was done for them to alleviate their sufferings, through the ministry of the Red Cross. The dollar you paid in 1917 did wonderful work. Now comes the call for the dollar to work for you in 1919. Pay it with a smile. Surely if our boys went over the top singing, we will go over the top for Red Cross membership, gladly singing.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

LIFE'S FINEST MIRACLE.
I've seen the sun at morning break
The sable canopy of night
I've seen the hills and fields awake
To beauty with the coming light
In ways mysterious and strange
And now upon life's battle line
I've seen the souls of mortals change

I've marveled at the birth of spring
To see the orchards come to bloom.
How glorious the blossoming
That follows after winter's gloom!
The miracles of life abound.
Beyond the grasp of human ken.
Out of the cold and barren ground
I've seen the roses grow again.

Now I have seen the soul awake.
(And looked upon a glorious youth
That once had lived for pleasure's sake
Go forth to battle for the truth.
I've seen the light of fire divine
In eyes that once were dull and cold.
Oh, privilege superbly fine!
I've seen the souls of men unfold.

I've seen men spurn the easier way
To tread the rugged heights of pain.
I've seen them turn from gods of clay
To worship One that shall remain.
I've seen them march from pleasure's ways
To answer when the helpless cry.
And in these dark and troubled days
For liberty I've seen them die.

—MORRIS MILLER—

Football players of other years have been frequently mentioned in the casual reports sent to this country from the battle ground in France. Gridiron stars in great numbers have made the sacrifice and if a complete list could be made up it undoubtedly would run far into the hundreds. A partial list has been prepared, and in it will be found some of the names which have meant so much in the football world in years gone by. Princeton and Williams have been unusually hard hit, with Yale and Harvard contributing their quota.

Following is the list containing a few of the ex-football players who have made their last charge:

Harvard—Mills, Starr, Doherty, H. Coolidge.
Yale—Wilson, Higginbotham, Spencer, Sullivan.
Princeton—Coe, Cockran, Duff, Blumenthal, Foulke, McLean, Ellisworth, C. Baker, Christie.
Williams—E. Brooks, O'Brien, Gifford, Pollard, Turner, Moecker, Blodgett.
Columbia—Healy, Buermeyer.
New York University—Carroll, Hartman—Emery, Pudrith, Hopkins.
Naval Academy—Nichols.
Brown—Bertman, McLaughlin.
Amherst—Ashley, Perkins.
Washington and Jefferson—Whitehall.
Military Academy—Dean.
Syracuse—Hamilton.

Pitcher Ray Fisher of the Yankees has been mustered out of the service and has returned to his home in Middletown, N.Y., where he will remain until time for the Yankees to leave for the southland in the spring. Fisher enlisted in the army in December, 1917, and was sent with other recruits to Fort Slocum. He got no further, as he was appointed to the position of athletic director at the fort and held the post up to the time of his discharge.

I see Wilbert Robinson has been named for another year as manager of the Brooklyn club. That means the scribes can call the team the Robins for another season at least.

Jack Britton is credited by many with being the champion repeater because of his fourteen bouts with Ted (Kid) Lewis. The real champion, however, is not the former welterweight champion, but Sam Langford, who has met Sam McVey just fourteen times; took Joe Jeannette over the ropes in a matter of eleven battles; exchanged knocks with Al Hart with nice snugs and even met Jack Blackburn on four occasions.

Umpire Billy Evans says the hardest job an umpire has is to chase a player from the game. It may be, but, still, but a lot of the nips seem to like the job.

William T. (Bill) Tilden, Jr., of Philadelphia, whose many triumphs featured the lawn tennis world last season, although he lost the national singles championship to H. Lindsey Murray at Forest Hills, says Murray should rank No. 1 this season.

Regarding his match with Murray, Tilden says: "I was beaten by Murray at Forest Hills and would have been beaten by him that day, no matter what shape I had been in. He was playing simply an unbeatable game. It wasn't my foot that lost for me. It was Murray's attack, which couldn't be stopped. He had everything, and I have never seen any better playing."

It was an hour or more before Andy said anything. "How much longer does this Gravely hold its good taste?" he says. "Two or three little squares last me all morning," answers Barney. "This class of tobacco lasts so much longer it costs no more to chew it than ordinary plug costs."

It goes further—that's why you can get the good taste of this class of tobacco without extra cost.

The Census in Ancient Times.

While the greatest strides in the advance of vital statistics as a science have been made in recent years, their origin may be traced to centuries before Christ. Indeed, Herodotus tells us of a census of Egypt taken about 2050 B. C. for the purpose of making arrangements for the construction of the Pyramids. Elsewhere this same author refers to a second census, taken about 1400 B. C. in Egypt by Rameses II for the purpose of reapportioning all the land of Egypt among his subjects. The Bible tells us that Moses counted the tribes of Israel to determine their fighting strength and that David, about 1018 B. C., took a census for the same purpose. There is a record of a census taken in China about 1200 B. C., when data of the provinces were collected by Uking—S. W. Wynne, Michigan Bulletin of Vital Statistics.

Waste of Human Material.

Any man who has been in the world forty-five years or more should be a valuable employee. For a man to be shelved at forty-five is wrong, very wrong. For a man to lose confidence in himself because he is forty-five or thereabouts is absurd. The man who has been in the world forty-five years has had a vast amount of experience and has had the opportunity to observe much that could be turned to good account. The trouble with us is that we do not know where to take our goods to market, or at least we do not know the best market in which to dispose of our goods. There is a great waste of human material because of this misplacement. We give more attention to the salesmanship problem in relation to goods than to the infinitely more important subject of human material. New York Mail.

Sleep Should Be Undisturbed.

People are beginning to realize that sound sleep isn't obtainable in a bed that rattles or squeaks or that shocks the nerves into semi-wakefulness by unusual slippings of the springs or unexpected creakings. The advent of the separate bed and the banishing of the double bed into the limbo of warming pans and nightcaps is a distinct advance from the standpoint of hygiene, sanitation and more rational sleeping habits. When separate beds, or, better still, separate sleeping chambers, are in universal use, men and women, especially nervous men and women, and delicate children, will get a good deal more sleep than they do at present; they'll derive more benefit from the sleep they do get. All this will make it easier for them to do with considerably less sleep than they now require.

—ROY K. MOULTON—

A MODERN VERSION.
Mother, dear mother, come home with me now.

The clock in the steeple strikes six. You said you were coming right home from your work.

An old man in a terrible fix. He's been taking care of the seven young kids.

'Tis more of a job than you think. He wants to get supper, but all of the pans

And kettles are piled in the sink. Cho.—Come home, come home, etc.

He's been darning stockings until he is lame.

His fingers are weary and sore. He's mopey and he's scrubbed, and although he is game

He says he can't stand for much more. The furnace fire's out and the cat's in the mill.

The hired girl quit yesterday. Since you've taken his place in the mill there's no peace.

Oh, mother, come home right away. Cho.—Come home, come home, etc.

The Mayflower progeny bid fair to be quite eclipsed, outclassed and outnumbered by the "Descendants of the S. S. George Washington."

It appears that O. Henry has "come back" on several occasions and communicated with oullets. We wish some time, when he "comes back" to spend the evening, he would drop his recipe for the making of good short

FORTUNE BUILDING

Everyone has the materials for building a fortune, but they do not use them. These materials are "economy" and "grit."

Practicing economy is not a hardship on you; it only means living within your means, so that you may put away a little money for the future—that "rainy day"—when adversity comes to you or when you grow old and are unable to work.

"Grit" is the ability to stick to your resolution to have money. A fortune is within the grasp of all. It is up to you. Lay the foundation by coming in and joining our "Accumulating" Banking Club now with the firm intention of keeping up your payments every year for five years.

Each deposit will be a block in the fortune you are building and in time you will have built a wall against debt and poverty—a wall that will protect you and yours.

WHAT IT MEANS TO HAVE MONEY

When you have accumulated money, you gain with it character and self-reliance which others, who have also made money, recognize. These people know you because you have shown you have "the right stuff" in you, and you are offered more opportunities to make more money—and these opportunities, you would never otherwise hear about.

It gives you a prominent place in your city and community.

It is not the money alone that does this, but the fact that you had the brains to start building your fortune and the courage to go through with it.

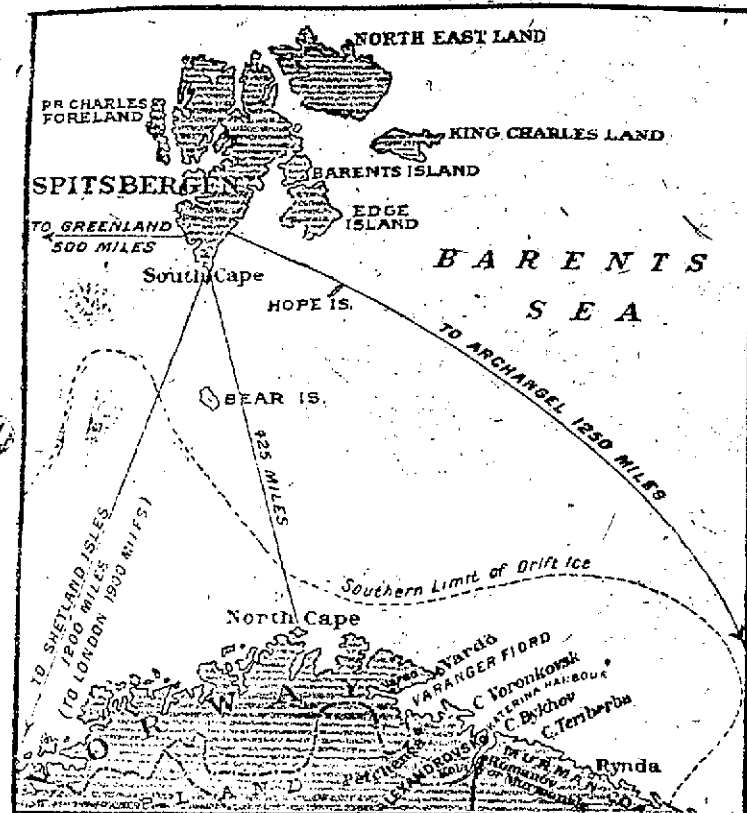

It means comfort, peace of mind and the satisfaction of knowing that should you be suddenly taken away, those dependent on you would not be left in poverty and misery.

You have no fear of the present or future—you have done your duty.

PROBLEM OF SPITZBERGEN, GENUINE "NO MAN'S LAND," SUBJECT FOR PEACE TABLE

The position of Spitzbergen in relation to London and Norway.

A land where highway robbery, murder and other high crimes and misdemeanors are perfectly legal will be one of the problems that will arise to perplex the peace conference. This land is Spitzbergen, 400 miles north of Norway and embracing 50,000 square miles. Although it is wonderfully rich in iron, coal, marble and pure gypsum, Spitzbergen is without a government and remains unclaimed by any nation.

METHODS OF MARKING MONEY

Officials Trap Speculators Who Dip Nefariously Into the Cash Drawer.

In their surveillance and apprehension of suspected persons government secret officers often find it necessary to "mark the money" handled by such persons. There are various methods of so marking the national currency, one of the most novel of which is the pin-prick.

The note to be marked is, say, the $5 silver certificate bearing the vignette of an Indian chief in full regalia of feathers and trappings and presenting a full-face view. With the aid of a pin the secret service man makes two punctures in the bill directly in the pupils of the Indian's eyes. To the casual and sometimes even critical inspector of the note these pin-pricks are invisible. If raised to the light, however, the bill will distinctly reveal them.

The markings are complicated by the following process: The pinpoint is applied in the "twist" of the large figure 5 of the two upper corners of the note. These tiny twists do not appear on the "necks" of the two figures 5 that are on both sides of the bottom of the note. The note is now placed again, this time at the ends of the scrolls on each side of the word "five" in the lower center of the bill. The marking is now complete. In secret it is exhibited to one or more persons for purposes of identification and is then placed in the bill or money drawer to which the suspected person has access.

It is said that the pin-pricks will remain perfect for some time. When such bills are produced in court and their markings are explained under oath conviction is practically certain. —Literary Digest.

Differences in Coast Line.

The line of the Atlantic coast is largely of mud and sand, and has very little elevation. On the other hand, the Pacific coast line of Washington, Oregon and California is almost entirely rocky and precipitous. While the Atlantic and Gulf coasts are dotted with numerous harbors where ships may seek safety in time of storm, very different conditions exist on the Pacific where there are few harbors, and where at long intervals.

HAD BEGINNING IN ROMANCE

Pretty Legendary Story Concerning Tea That Dates Some 2,000 Years Before Christ.

The Chinese claim to be the first users of tea as a drink, and how it originated is told in a pretty little legend that dates back 2,000 years before the coming of Christ.

A daughter of a then reigning sovereign fell in love with a young nobleman, whose inferior birth excluded him from marrying her. They managed to exchange glances, and he occasionally gathered a few blossoms and had them conveyed to her.

One day in the palace garden the lovers met, and the young man endeavored to give her a few flowers; but so keen was the watchfulness of her attendants that all she could grasp was a little twig with green leaves.

On reaching her room she put the twig in water, and toward evening she drank the water in which the twig had been kept. So agreeable was the taste that she even ate the leaves and the stalks. Every day afterward she had bunches of the tea tree brought to her, which she treated in the same way.

Imitation being the sincerest form of flattery, the ladies of the court tried the experiment, and with such pleasing results that the custom spread throughout the kingdom—and the great Chinese tea industry became one of the greatest businesses in the world.

HEARD FROM OUR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

Sergt. Marshall Davis
17-01

Sergt. Marshall Davis of Co. C, 107th Supply Train, writes on Nov. 10th, telling her of his experiences in going to the hospital, while there, and while returning to his company. The letter following is his copy.

I had been feeling rather sick for three days lying in quarters during that time. The third afternoon I developed a high temperature and went over to the infirmary to have my temperature taken. The Medical Sergeant looked at the thermometer, told me I had 104.5 and called the Captain. He looked me over and gave orders that I should be evacuated to a hospital. While an attendant went after an ambulance, the Sergeant made out a tag with my name, Company and Captain's diagnosis on it. This he fastened to my chest. By the time I had gotten my toilet articles together a Ford ambulance was waiting. I climbed into the seat with the driver and we were off, 4:30 p. m. The road "never, undetermined type."

Arrived at Picket Hospital at 5:30 and went right to bed. My fever went down and I felt fairly comfortable. About 8:30, a nurse of us were ordered to be evacuated to another hospital just at midnight. We left in ambulances at 10:30, arriving at an evacuation hospital just at midnight. Right to bed and sleep pretty good. Ate quite a breakfast the next morning and then helped wash the dishes. The doctor came around at 10:00 a. m., and after looking me over, charged me with influenza. This was August 24. Right after dinner a number of us were taken to a railroad station nearby to train for a Base Hospital. Had a cross train about 2:30 in the evening and arrived at the Hospital at Tours about 3:30 the next afternoon.

We lined up and passed by a table before which sat a couple doctors and were assigned to different wards, according to our ailments. I was put in No. 2. Then we went to a bath house and threw away all our clothes in a heap. Had a good hot bath. Then we were given pajamas, a bathrobe and slippers and sent to our respective wards. Here we were assigned to our beds, mine was No. 32. Each ward had 50 beds, placed in two rows the length of the ward.

Pretty soon the nurse brought some chicken soup around, also a piece of toast. Then the doctor examined me and said I had chronic pharyngitis. Later in the day he came and questioned me and had a Sergeant take some blood from my ear for a microscopic test. On the morning of August 27th, the doctor said the blood test showed I had malaria fever, so I was confined to my bed and given three quinine pills each day. They kept this up for two solid weeks ending with a single dose of 20 grains. (7 pills) of quinine before breakfast.

Next day I was allowed to dress in some clothes and run around to suit myself. Got a complete uniform, an overcoat and slicker. Went down to Tours a couple of times to have glasses fitted, also to look the town over. Was transferred from Ward No. 2 to the convalescent side of the hospital, where I remained for two weeks, doing nothing but a little typewriting.

for the chief nurse at Headquarters. Left the hospital at noon, Sunday, October 6, entrained at 6:30 p. m. and arrived at the classification camp about 11:30. Had a cup of coffee, three doughnuts and two cookies. Slept on the ground in a barrack and aside from someone trying to use me for a sidewalk, I guess nothing else of importance happened.

At 8 a. m. the next morning, a large number were lined up and started through the "mill" to be re-classified, equipped, etc. I will tell what happened to me and leave the rest to look out for themselves.

Entered a large barrack at one end, had my teeth and throat inspected, and was then examined all over for contagious diseases, by a doctor. Next I went into another room where a clerk made out a slip with my name, Company, Regiment, and Division on it. One of these made out such an "initial information slip" with my name, number (268,898) rank, Company, regiment, division, name and address of nearest relative, where and when I landed in the line. From there I entered the clothing department. In the first part were a number of low tables with a desk in the center, at which sat a clerk. I sprang out such clothes as I already had and the clerk checked these off on the clothing slip. He also noticed, noted there on what articles I should be issued, then the fun commenced.

As I passed through the warehouse, each clerk handed out some article as called for on the clothing slip, until by the time I emerged, I was loaded down completely and had a heavy suitcase through the door ways. Here is what I had in a shelter half: 1 pair field shoes, 1 suit underwear, 3 pairs socks, 1 tent roll, 5 tent pins, 1 pair leather mittens, 1 mess kit, 1 cup, 1 cartridge belt, 1 overcoat, 1 slicker, 1 shirt, 1 blouse, 1 O. D., 3 socks, 1 "Bull Durham" tobacco, 1 layonet and scrubboard, 1 rifle, 1 condiment can (ketchup), 1 salt and pepper shaker, 1 can of corned beef, 4 boxes of hard tack and two heavy woolen blankets. Believe me I was glad when I got to my bunk and could roll most of the stuff into it.

While at the classification camp, we only were allowed to leave our barracks for 15 minutes at a time, as no one knew where we would be wanted for evacuation. After supper we could be gone until taps at 9:30. Saw several reels of American movies at the Y. M. C. A. one night. Left the camp at 8:30 p. m. on Friday, October 11th for my company, "Somewhere at the Front." Forty men in each box car and away we went. There was room for thirty eight to sit down and the other two walked over the rest looking for a place. Traveled in this way for five nights and two days, before arriving at the station of our division. Ran into the company a few miles from the station, and believe me I stayed there.

Since then I've done a little of everything, until the last two weeks when I settled down to Company clerk work again. I am caught up now and spend my spare moments making souvenirs to send home to my friends.

Sergt. Marshall Davis.

Half-Way House

By OTTILIA FRANCIS PFEIFFER

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

Outside the romantic looking log cabin in the woodland Walter Muir sat at his easel. It was his first week of outling, scarcely a hermit existence, for north two miles was the town of Alden and down the road double that distance was the popular summer resort, Lakeside.

He had visited neither. The great fashionable hotel had no attraction for him, and a cart drove up every morning and took his order for all household necessities. As he laid aside his palette, he caught sight of a flying figure in the road. It was that of a young girl driving a bicycle. Then there was a jangle, a slight scream, and he ran out to find the rider striving to arise to her feet from the way-side dust and the machine lying ten feet down a slanting ditch.

"Are you hurt? Let me assist you," and Muir hastened to the side of the unfortunate bicyclist and aided her to her feet.

"I am only a little shaken up," she said, but hazily.

"My cottage is just yonder. You must rest," and she did not demur as he supported her to a great old-fashioned rocker under a tree. Then he brought out a pitcher of cool, fresh, well water. She smiled bravely as the shock of her fall diminished. "I will go and see what has happened to the bicycle," said Muir, and her grateful glance followed him.

He found the mechanism of the bicycle considerably disarranged. Scattered over quite a space were the contents of an upturned basket. He gathered up the packages, which seemed to contain groceries, and, running the bicycle with one hand, drove it up to his guest.

"I have gathered up those scattered parcels," he said. "It will take about an hour to repair the damage to the machine. I have a tool kit in the house," and he returned with it and a late magazine. The young lady, however, was far more interested watching him at his repairing task than reading.

She seemed to feel it due to him to be companionable, and informed him that she was a guest at Lakeside. She had been headed for a family living near Alden when the accident had occurred—some poor people named Woods, to whom she had been requested to show little kindnesses during her stay in the vicinity. When the bicycle had been repaired she thanked Muir with grateful ardor, expressing the hope that her future daily sessions would not end in disaster.

"I shall be on sentry duty hereafter to see that you make that ugly road curve in safety," he told her laughingly, and she seemed pleased at his chivalrous consideration.

She passed the next morning, but he simply lifted his cap and she bade him a pleasant greeting. Upon her return trip, however, she came into view wheeling the bicycle by hand. It was a very warm day and the lack of oil had made pedalling laborious. He invited her to rest, brought out a bowl of delicious lemonade and adjusted the machine, and after that each day they chatted at least for a few moments.

One morning the delivery man from town did not arrive with supplies as usual. A lark had appeared in his stead, explaining that he was helping him for a few days. He chanced to mention his name, Dan Woods.

"Is it your family that a young lady from Lakeside visits daily?" inquired Muir.

"You mean Miss Ridgely?" asked the lad. Yes, indeed. You know she belongs to the big banker's family in the city. Her father is Guthrie Ridgely, and ma says she's got five millions in her own right. You see, ma's sister was nurse to Mr. Ridgely when he was a child, and he always sent her money and presents, and when his daughter came down here he asked her to see Aunt Martha, but she died last year. All the same, Miss Ridgely does for us. She's got the kindest heart in the world, ma says."

Walter Muir sat like one stunned after the lad had departed. Miss Althea Ridgely, the daughter of Guthrie Ridgely—yes, he had heard of her, and his heart sank like lead, for how could he, a poor artist, ever hope to aspire to the heiress to millions? When his bicycle guest arrived two hours later she found him packing up his effects.

"I am leaving here in the morning," he told her, and his face was colorless and despondent. "I shall never forget these two weeks of my life in your company—Miss Ridgely."

For the first time he spoke the name. "Why do you call me that?" she asked.

"Is it not your name?" he returned. "One of the Woods family said so."

"Oh, they think that, and I have not cared to correct them. No, Mr. Muir, I am Nina Blake, a music teacher, and a close friend of Althea Ridgely, who brought me to Lakeside with her. She was called home almost immediately, and I undertook to execute a mission her father entrusted to her in behalf of the Woods family."

"I shall remain another week," spoke Muir, his face brightening, his eyes fixed upon her own.

She flushed and trembled, for that glance assured her that before the week passed he would tell her what her heart longed to hear—that he loved her.

RABBIT BY NO MEANS TIMID

Correspondent Writes of Happening Which Would Seem to Make Old Saying a Foolish Thing.

A story of the fearlessness of the rabbit when still a baby is sent by a correspondent. Remarking on the "businessness of the popular saying "As scared as a rabbit" when Bunny is unsupervised by the world, "B" says: "Some days ago I was passing with a friend through a woodland glade, and suddenly there appeared on the path before us, say 50 yards away, a young wild rabbit, evidently just escaped from the nursery. It was almost too young to run, and tripped over its feet in the most comic manner—for all the world like a baby tumbling over its pinafore. It came slowly lolling, lolling toward us, and we held our breath for fear of scaring it away; for it was a most fascinating little creature, just a bundle of fluff and comedy. Then while we watched, tragedy sprang up full armed. A weasel, moving swiftly, silently through the trees, made a sudden dart. In one second all would have been over with bunny, but my companion clapped her hands and gave a wild cry of anger, dancing about in wrath. The weasel fled for its life. But the baby rabbit stopped to laugh a moment, and then came lolling a little faster toward us—right up to us, in fact. We had actually to drive the little creature back to where we guessed its home might be before we could go on our way with quiet minds. "Scared as a rabbit," indeed!"

Cockneys Adaptable.

The adaptability of the London girl to farm work is equaled by the adaptability of London youth (particularly the real Cockney type) to almost any work and any circumstances.

I have known a Cockney, entirely ignorant of machinery, to learn all about a thrashing machine inside a week, and to be in sole control of it on the eighth day.

And it is well known that some of our smartest cavaliers are Cockneys. Young fellows who were never on a horse before become expert riders in an incredibly short time. Whatever else the Cockney may or may not be he is nearly always observant, quick in the uptake and useful with his hands.—London Chronicle.

FIRST UNIT OF WOMEN TO BE SENT TO FRANCE BY THE JEWISH WELFARE BOARD

These four young women are the first to be sent overseas by the Jewish Welfare Board. They will sail shortly to help in wartime work in the educational and recreational program undertaken by the welfare agencies for the American expeditionary forces and to minister to the needs of the Jewish soldiers abroad.

These first four volunteers to go are Miss Ester Rosenfeldt of Washington, D. C., Miss Rose Lutsky of Baltimore, Miss Rebecca Affachiner of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Miss Mathilda Solomon of New York city. One hundred more workers expect to be sent over shortly. Nearly one-half of the $5,215,800 sought by the New York campaign for Jewish suffering was at hand before Sunday, when the drive ended. The final report has not yet been made, but it is expected that the drive has gone "over the top" in fine shape.

The Million Dollar Baby

By Saidee Estelle Balcom

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Myra, you must do exactly as I say or all is lost."

"But, my little one—oh, Arnold! I cannot part with him."

"You must. That is the crux of the entire situation. You will leave here tomorrow, apparently with the child. You must make the perilous journey over the frontier. The child may be taken from you."

Arnold Brooks spoke with a definite seriousness brooding that he meant every word he said. The environment was typical of a rough Mexican life. He was in charge of some mining property worked by Mexicans, and since war disturbances had racked the country these had become indolent, indifferent and often threatening.

Long since Arnold had felt it unsafe to remain in this hot-bed of insurrection, and had decided that sooner or later he must at least get his wife and child to safety and civilization. Then the birth of little Edwin had interrupted.

It was strange, but there was only one person in the whole community to whom Arnold could go for help, and that was Ezra Washington. He was a full-blooded negro. With his wife and family he had accompanied the Brooks family to the mines to perform household service, and had shown such staunch fidelity to the interests of Arnold that the latter had learned to repose perfect confidence in the crude, uncouth fellow and his wife. They had a brood of five children, occupied a cabin near the hacienda, and Arnold felt a certain sense of security in having Ezra around, for the latter was vigilant and kept in close touch with the doings of the Mexicans. It was to the cabin of Ezra that Arnold went after leaving his wife and child. He sought out Ezra, took him to a safe distance from any possible eavesdroppers and faced him frankly.

"Ezra," he said, "you have been a diligent, faithful helper ever since we came to the mines, and when we get back home the company shall know of the fact and compensate you accordingly."

"Don't care for dat feachur, Mr. Brooks," replied Ezra indifferently. "You folks her been good and kind to me, you and missus is good people, and old Ezra is glad to be honored by being in your service, sah."

"Well, there is not a soul here I trust but you, Ezra," proceeded Arnold seriously, "and I am going to repose great confidence in you and ask you to undertake a great responsibility. Things are getting very serious around here, as you know."

"Sittin' hot, sah, and there's going to be a blow up soon, shuah!"

"I am planning to send my wife north and we are all to follow. The baby—"

"The million-dollar baby! Little Edwin, yes, sah," grinned Ezra. "bless his dear little heart! No place here for either of them."

"The million-dollar baby" was no deception. It was known to Ezra that the wealthy father of Mrs. Brooks had declared right after the birth of the little child, the first in the family for 20 years, that he should make the newcomer his heir. Hence the broad allusion of Ezra.

"You see, Ezra," resumed Arnold, "the advent of the little one and his adoption as heir by my father-in-law has set villainy at work. There is a man, an adopted son of Mr. Adams, whose chances of fortune will be superseded by the child. I have information that he has plotted with some Mexicans down here to kidnap, perhaps kill the child, at least never allow it to leave the country. What would you say if I asked you to go across your sacred river, provide my wife with a substitute child, take charge of little Edwin, and baffle the mercenary plotters?"

"I'd say, sah," Ezra declared with vim and promptness, "that it can be done."

Myra Brooks started from the town early one morning in the rickety coach that plied between it and the nearest railroad point. It was with a feeling of vast relief that two weeks later Arnold learned of her safe arrival at home with a substitute child, a little orphan secured from a children's asylum at Pontiac, to represent the real million-dollar baby. The stage had been attacked, evidently by ruffians, after the child, but they were beaten off and two of the bandits shot and killed. Ezra had left with his wife and children seven days previous. No one thought of molesting the old negro and his shiny black brood.

The anxious Myra one day was in a mild stage of excitement as she received word that Ezra had arrived at Houston. She hurried to the home of one of his friends to find him and his family grouped in a small room.

"The baby—little Edwin?" she gasped eagerly.

Ezra took up a dusky bit of humanity from the cradle, black as the ace of spades.

"Don't be frightened, little missie," soothed the grinning Ezra. "Dat's sho ra little dear one. Massa, just radicate de black disguise of dis blessed cherub and give him to his yearning mother, safe and sound. Yes, missie, we had to use a camouflage, but we passed de lines safely with the million-dollar baby!"

The Difference.

"Of course, it seems funny," said the facetious observer's wife. "But the evening gown is for the woman who stays up most all night, and the night gown is for the one who goes to bed about nine o'clock."

Business Woman.

"Ah, here comes Mr. Rocks. I'll be nice to him and maybe he'll make love to me so my husband can sue him for alienating my affections."

TELLS OF GERMAN SPY WORK IN U. S.

A. Bruce Bielaski.

Specific details of the astounding propaganda and spy activities of German agents in this country are being given the senate judicial committee by A. Bruce Bielaski, who recently resigned as head of the bureau of investigation.

MANY TALES TOLD OF LAST HOUR OF THE GREAT STRUGGLE

Apparently the Germans did not fully understand what the armistice was meant for, writes one Janesville boy who was with an Illinois National Guard regiment during the closing hours of the great struggle in the first line of the fighting. "We know in the morning that all fighting was to stop at eleven o'clock and were mighty glad but imagine our surprise when the Germans began one of their greatest bombardments, threw down a barrage just as they did when about to make an attack, from nine o'clock on, of course our guns replied and the noise was something terrible. Then a few minutes before eleven they started a mustard gas attack. Well, when eleven sounded, we all started cheering and dancing around as the firing had ceased and then came the gas without any warning. It certainly was a typical 'Jerry trick' and I do not know how many boys suffered from this unusual and wanton trick. I know some of my company were killed that last day, others wounded and more gassed."

Sergeant James P. Horne, who was reported wounded on October 15th, enlisted with Company M, in this city shortly after war was declared and went with that company to Camp Douglas, and later to Camp MacArthur, Texas.

He was on the George Washington, the same vessel that President Wilson crossed to France, when his division, the 32nd, sailed in February of this year. During the entire summer the 32nd division was actively engaged on the firing line and Sergeant Horne saw much service. Unless he has made a rapid recovery, he is still in the hospital and not with his old company, which is seeing service in Germany at the present time.

William Cushing Mrs. T. W. Cushing has received a letter from her son, William Cushing, 18th, stating he is all right and was on the firing line on November 11th when the last shots were fired. He also was in the 32nd division, and writes that he has had enough experience for a life time and he is glad it is over with now. He was expecting to be in Berlin shortly when the war ended and is well on his way with his division, he is now in Germany taking over the disputed strip of territory until the actual peace was signed.

Imperfect Shooting Laws. We have federal laws protecting migratory birds during certain periods, and the government has established many reservations for them. But the laws of our various states are conflicting and confusion often results, to the detriment of the birds.

No better illustration of this can be found than with the robin. In the North it is protected all the year around as a songster. It flies to the North early in the spring and is looked after and cared for until late in the fall. It then goes South, where several of the states allow it to be killed, and it is actually sold in the open markets of a number of Southern cities.

But the general attitude of the people toward birds is changing for the better in all the states, South included. We are coming to understand them—North and South—and with better understanding there comes greater encouragement.—Pennsylvania Grit.

Read the want ads.

The clash between the newly formed Jugo-Slav nation and Italy on the eastern shores of the Adriatic has reached an acute stage.

The Jugo-Slav national council at Zagreb, acting as the provisional government for all Jugo-Slav territory formerly incorporated in the Austro-Hungarian empire, has submitted a protest to the allied governments against Italian administration in the occupied territories of Dalmatia, Istria and Croatia.

This administration, it is pointed out, violates the principles of nationality and greatly exceeds the limits set by the armistice with Austria-Hungary. The right of the treaty of London, entered into by the allies at the beginning of the present war and granting Italy territory included in the limits of the new Jugo-Slav state, is challenged.

The accompanying map shows the territory in dispute. The dotted portions give the approximate limits of the territory conceded to Italy by the treaty of London. The cross-lined portions show the additional territory now occupied by Italian forces. This takes in the entire Adriatic littoral to the region south of Avion, Albania.

Italy claims it is holding the entire coast for military reasons to assure the carrying out of the armistice provisions, but has been insisting upon more comprehensive claims to new territory than outlined in the treaty of London.

EXHIBITS ARE MADE LIFELIKE

Mounting of Natural History Objects in Their Native Surroundings Add to Their Interest.

In the development of the modern museum three stages have been recognized—that of the collection of objects for record, that of supplying materials for research and that of applying the collections to public education. The educational idea is now being developed by instructive display arrangement, loan exhibits for public and private schools and special lectures. The most notable feature is the mounting of natural history objects in the midst of their native surroundings, and much attention is being given at large museums—such as the American Museum of Natural History of New York—to grouping animals in their natural environment of shrubs, trees, flowers, rocks and other objects. In the new exhibition halls of the museum of the California Academy of Sciences, the case for a large mammal or bird habitat group is 25 feet long, 12 deep and 18 high, with a plate glass front 25 feet long and 10 high. Each of the two halls—one devoted entirely to California mammals and the other to California birds—is 180 feet long by 60 wide and 11 of the large cases have been placed in the mammal hall with six in the bird hall. Skylight illumination gives greater brightness in the cases than outside, preventing troublesome reflection from the glass. As a representative group may be taken that of the San Joaquin valley elk, a species of deer now preserved in a few reservations, and this is shown by several individuals standing or crouching in the grass near tree-bordered water, with low hills in the distance, the painted background seeming a continuation of the real scenery.

ON BASIS OF COMPROMISE

Couples' Religious Differences, Which Caused Trouble Once a Year, Settled in Peculiar Manner.

Compromise where political and religious antagonisms are concerned is evidently possible in Belfast, according to the testimony of a recent visitor to that town. One day she had occasion to call at a house where a woman of the Roman Catholic faith had married a Protestant husband. On one side of the mantelpiece was a bust of the pope, on the other a bust of William of Orange. "I suppose you find it very difficult to agree at times?" inquired the visitor. "No," was the ready reply; "we only differ once a year, on the Boyne anniversary, when my husband comes home drunk and smashes my bust of the pope." "Then I suppose you return the compliment by smashing his William of Orange?" "Not at all—I put it in pawn and buy another bust of the pope with the money," was the unexpected answer.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

ALLIES PLAN RAILROAD FROM BORDEAUX TO ODESSA

Even after victory by the allies, Germany's dream of a Mitteleuropa, the Berlin-Bagdad railroad, it is recognized, would remain an economic advantage to Germany as an artery through which an increasing volume of trade would flow, with the possibility of its use for hidden political advantages.

Route of proposed Bordeaux-Belgrade-Odessa railway.

To prevent this railroad from becoming the dominating link the Germans intended it to be, a Bordeaux-to-Odessa railroad, to provide a land route to Constantinople through southern Europe and to establish an economic tie through newly organized states, is being urged by entente diplomats. What is proposed is a great new artery of travel in Europe, springing with much significance out of the realization that political ties, unless supported economically, will be unstable. Only a few days ago Jules Ceis, French under secretary of public works and transport, said that studies were being made in France for the proposed Bordeaux-Belgrade-Odessa railway route.

SICK AND WOUNDED PRISONERS ARE ON THEIR WAY HOME

American prisoners on way home.

One term of the armistice called for the immediate release of American and allied prisoners from German camps. The American prisoners are now bound for home.

Many of the prisoners were wounded or sick. Their more fortunate comrades helped them on the journey. The seriously wounded and sick were taken to American base hospitals until they are able to travel. The photo shows some of the well American prisoners helping their disabled brothers to a base hospital.

This used to be the Bridge Club

—and many a jolly afternoon they had, too, with their aces, and hearts, and jacks, and trumps.

Then the war came!

Brothers, husbands, sons, sweethearts left home to be aces of the air, jacks of the navy or trumps of the American Army.

The afternoon meetings continued—but the scenes changed to Red Cross workrooms. And serious, busy fingers of hundreds of thousands of patriotic American women worked day in and day out to alleviate the suffering of their loved ones, and yours, too, who responded so gallantly to the country's needs.

They gave their time, and energy, and devotion to the Red Cross cause of humanity, without stint or murmur—their work has been one of the finest, most enduring examples of unselfish service of America's whole war experience.

Those wonderful women have made the foundation of future Red Cross work, in a big way, possible. That work must go on, of course—as long as American soldiers are over the sea the Red Cross is necessary—as long as emergency relief work needs to be done.

And now comes your turn to make the carrying on of the Red Cross work a certainty—none of your time is asked for no special effort—just the support of your membership.
